Program Notes

Dedicated to my first child, Charlotte Louise, and my incredibly supportive wife, Elisabeth.

In the spring of 2022 I discovered the work, "Heaven's Morning Breaks" which quickly turned into my favorite on our concert program; throughout the rehearsal process my students' eyes lit up each day we spent time with the piece. For years I have been looking for an opportunity to commission a piece and because of the way Brooke's compositional voice resonated with me and my students, I knew I wanted to work with him to bring new music into the world.

Our initial conversations centered around a commission for a flashy fanfare and concert opener. However, shortly after these conversations I found out that my first child was on her way. Having never been a father before (and admittedly never really seeing myself as one) my entire perspective on everything changed almost overnight. I told Brooke the news in hopes that it would help him find some inspiration for the piece. What was born (pun intended) is a fanfare filled with angst and strife, but also hope. This piece perfectly captures my emotions as I embark on life's greatest journey: parenthood.

Tommy Bunnens, Director of Bands, Charlotte High School

Conductor Notes

This work is sort of an "anti-fanfare". Many traditional fanfare lines and rhythms are present, including rising articulated passages, dotted pitches with subsequent quicker articulations, and flourishes in the winds. However, interspersed is a constant sense of turbulence; a juxtaposition of triumph, anguish, and fury, in addition to lush and lyrical lines.

Triplet passages are not marked always marked marcato but should adhere to a true fanfare style with a clean and marked articulation. In moments where the marcato is shown, do not over-emphasize (these are simply reminders to keep the 16th notes clear and marked).

Legato sections should contrast greatly and be as smooth as possible. When fanfare style rhythms become present, often with trumpet, horn, or trombone, (such as mm31 and 38) these should be articulated just as with any fanfare but usually understated and within the texture rather than dominating.

Trills in the woodwinds are optional if players are unable to execute them quickly however it is ideal to use them.

Harmonies at G are meant to be highly dissonant. Embrace them.

Rehearsal H should be as large, broad, and grandiose as possible, with the triplet pattern permeating clearly (and not too short).

In general, work to ensure accents are not too short throughout the work. In most cases, emphasis is more important than separation.
